

Global Banking Client Delivering security in the built environment

“CornerStone joined the project design team and using their consultancy delivery process, developed the security design package through the RIBA stages to completion in coordination with the wider team and client stakeholders. Once the design was approved it was released for procurement alongside the clients other M&E fitout packages. CornerStone continued to support the project in construction phase, completing handover and witness testing to ensure project delivery to the client's deadlines and requirements”.

Project

CornerStone's banking sector client was consolidating and moving a number of London office staff into a 250,000 sqft new London HQ within a newly built iconic London building. The client required security consultancy services during RIBA stages 3, 4, 5 and 6 to design and deliver security measures to meet the operational requirements of the building, their staff and finance sector compliance requirements.

Outcome

Using our RIBA stage aligned delivery process, CornerStone was able to work in parallel with the Architectural and M&E design teams to ensure they had the correct level of detail and information of the security design at each stage to develop their own packages. CornerStone's delivery process also ensured the client and their security stakeholders were engaged early enough to accommodate compliance and operational requirements easily into the design package. Upon integrator selection, CornerStone continued to support the project in construction phase, completing handover and witness testing to ensure project delivery to the client's deadlines and requirements.
